Best twitter video format

First, the base of the video is on the user's internet connection. If you have a bad/slow internet connection, Twitter would temper with the video quality and reduce it to optimise the best user experience. Second, in order to save user's uploading time of a video, Twitter uses video compression, a feature that reduces the overall size of the video. Suppose you have recorded a 4k video of 30mbs, it will compress the video to 10mbs, making the Twitter video quality horrible. Lastly, you do not record every video in the same manner; each video has its own format. The format works according to the device by which you record your video. Twitter supports some particular formats, not every video format and this results in Twitter's bad video quality. Tips to Fix Twitter Video Quality The most common solution to the problem would be fixing your internet speeds which would keep Twitter to least interfere with your viewing experience and tempering your video quality, so consider switching to a better internet providing facility. If you have the best internet facility and the best internet speeds, the next suggested fix is the video format. The recommended/best format is the MP4 video file format by Twitter. It supports MOV file types, but the best is only the MP4 file type. If these given quirks do not work for you, consider using WonderShare Repair it Tool for the best results. Select any video from the list and hit repair. Preview the video for any errors or issues. If the video is still unable to work properly despite the quick fix or an error, you can further use the advanced mode to improve the quality further. Hit the advanced repair button available at the bottom of the page. Select the desired path for the files to save and wait until the whole repair process is complete. Twitter is a huge platform with billions of views on its videos almost daily. Many officials worldwide, celebrities and spokespersons use this platform, yet it is not perfect and needs further optimisation for the best user experience. People end up facing issues like the video quality issues as we have discussed in this article. These are temporary fixes and may change with time. Twitter should come up with a permanent fix so that users may enjoy a more hassle-free user experience. For the free online version of the video repair tool, you can see this version if you can't afford the premium version. Video is thriving on Twitter. The company reports that videos are 6X more likely to be retweeted than tweets with photos and 3X more likely to be retweeted than tweets with GIFs. And that's not all. Twitter ranks as the number 1 platform for "coming across video" organically, rather than searching it out specifically. Convinced but not sure how to jump on the bandwagon? We'll explain how to post videos to Twitter. How to post a video on Twitter There are a few different ways to post videos on Twitter, from recording, editing, and sharing directly from the Twitter app, to uploading a video to Twitter that you created, and going live. We'll take a look at how to do all three. How to upload video to Twitter We'll start with how to upload a video to Twitter that you've already created. You can upload a video from your computer by logging into your account at twitter.com. Then, click on the icon to add photos or video to your tweet and select the file from your computer. The video will be added to the tweet and you can add text and click "Tweet" to publish. Trying to upload a video to Twitter from your phone? The process is the same as on the web. Create a new tweet and click the icon to upload a photo or video clip and you can select a video to import from your device. You'll also have the opportunity to trim your video clip. Twitter video upload requirements When uploading videos to Twitter you'll need to make sure that your video file meets the limitations of video resolution and length. Here are some notes to keep in mind: Videos must be 2 minutes and 20 seconds or less. The minimum resolution for Twitter videos is 32 x 32 and the maximum resolution is 1920 x 1200 or 1200 x 1900. Supported formats are MP4 and MOV on the Twitter mobile apps and, on the web, MP4 with H264 format with AAC audio. The maximum file size is 512MB. How to record a video on Twitter There are two ways to create a video directly from Twitter, and both are available from the Twitter app only—recording a video and going live. You'll find the option to do either one of these when you click the icon to add a photo or video within the tweet interface, as shown in the screenshot below. "Camera" will allow you to shoot directly from your device to create a video for Twitter and "Live" will let you go live to share with the world whatever you are doing right at the moment. When you use the "Camera" function, you can hold down to record multiple clips and drag and drop to trim and rearrange the clips. When you use the "Live" function, you'll simply tap to "Go live" and, when you're done, tap to "End video." Live videos will automatically be posted as tweets so your followers can discover and watch them even after you've ended your live stream. You'll also be able to download the live video to your device when you're done, if you'd like. And that's it! Are you using video on Twitter? What type of results have you seen?
